Global Governance Under Strain Amid US Domestic Turmoil and Geopolitical Shifts

The United States faces compounding domestic crises that undermine its global leadership: a partial shutdown of the Department of Homeland Security due to congressional gridlock (C1-E15, C1-E26), controversial military strikes killing 133 alleged drug traffickers (C1-E27, C1-E40), and new scrutiny over ICE agent misconduct (C1-E38). Simultaneously, inheritance tax changes in the UK have unexpectedly revived annuity sales (C1-E2), highlighting divergent fiscal responses to economic pressures. Geopolitically, Bangladesh's BNP landslide victory under Tarique Rahman signals a potential pivot away from India toward alternative alliances (C1-E9, C1-E11, C1-E14, C1-E51), while US opposition to Vanuatu's support for the ICJ's climate ruling reveals tensions over international legal norms (C1-E10). In Asia, the UAE is emerging as a trade hub rivaling Hong Kong and Singapore (C1-E19), even as Hong Kong contends with local issues like food safety (C1-E37) and education policy (C1-E47). Meanwhile, cultural and political flashpoints persist: Arundhati Roy's withdrawal from the Berlinale over Gaza-related comments (C1-E17, C1-E23, C1-E44), Philippine senators implicated in Duterte-era crimes against humanity (C1-E13, C1-E49), and Thailand's return to dynastic politics (C1-E35, C1-E43). Environmental concerns also mount, with carcinogenic PFAS contamination detected at 25 sites in northern England (C1-E8). These developments collectively illustrate a world where institutional trust is eroding, great-power competition is intensifying, and subnational actors—from activists to local officials—are filling governance gaps.

Key Takeaways

- US DHS partially shut down due to funding impasse, disrupting key services (C1-E15, C1-E26).
- US military strikes on alleged drug boats killed 133 people in recent weeks (C1-E27, C1-E40).
- Bangladesh's BNP won a landslide election, potentially shifting foreign policy away from India (C1-E9, C1-E11, C1-E14).
- UK annuity sales hit record highs following inheritance tax changes by Rachel Reeves (C1-E2).
- Philippine senators named as co-perpetrators in ICC's Duterte crimes against humanity case (C1-E13, C1-E49).
- High levels of banned PFAS 'forever chemicals' found in 25 locations across Cumbria and Lancashire (C1-E8).
- UAE is surpassing Hong Kong and challenging Singapore as a global trade hub (C1-E19).
- Arundhati Roy quit Berlin Film Festival over jury chair's call to keep cinema apolitical regarding Gaza (C1-E17, C1-E23).
- US opposes Vanuatu's backing of ICJ's climate change ruling at the UN (C1-E10).
- Thailand's election restored political dynasties, reinforcing traditional patronage networks (C1-E35).
