Global tensions escalate amid Iran, Ukraine, and cartel violence

On February 24, 2026, multiple geopolitical flashpoints converged as the U.S. deployed its largest military force to the Middle East since 2003, following a rare White House briefing by Secretary of State Marco Rubio on Iran (C1-E2). This buildup coincides with student protests in Iran being met with armed police crackdowns (C1-E40), while Tehran’s government warns of 'red lines' (C1-E38). Simultaneously, the Russia-Ukraine war entered its fifth year, marked by European leaders visiting Kyiv (C1-E6) and President Zelenskyy pushing for EU accession by 2027 (C1-E33). Ukraine also urged China to play a 'critical' role in peace efforts (C1-E54). In Latin America, Mexico faces surging violence after the killing of cartel leader 'El Mencho,' prompting concerns over World Cup security (C1-E5, C1-E35), while 23 inmates escaped during the unrest (C1-E56). Meanwhile, Trump’s State of the Union address loomed large, expected to address tariffs, Iran policy, and Project 2025 (C1-E3, C1-E20, C1-E30), even as reports emerged that the DOJ withheld Epstein-related files involving Trump (C1-E52). In Asia, Modi’s visit to Israel occurs amid regional instability (C1-E4), and Hong Kong prepared its budget while advancing digital asset pilots (C1-E9, C1-E53). Technological developments include China unveiling a breakthrough AI transistor (C1-E24) and DJI suing to overturn a U.S. import ban (C1-E43). Humanitarian crises unfolded in Brazil, where floods killed at least 25 (C1-E13, C1-E16), and in Southeast Asia, where cyberscam farm survivors face destitution

(C1-E60). Despite these global strains, institutional responses—such as the SFC freezing insider traders' assets across jurisdictions (C1-E8)—highlight ongoing regulatory coordination.
